Welcome

Hugh Taylor, Guy's and St Thomas' Chairman said:

“After five successful years, Gracefield Gardens has become well known and it continues to provide a welcoming environment to the local people of Streatham and the surrounding area. I am delighted that our clinicians continue to work in partnership with local GPs, the council and the voluntary sector in a first-rate working environment delivering a very wide range of services.”

Steve Reed, Leader of Lambeth Council said:

“Gracefield Gardens has been at the core of the Streatham community for the past five years, and has proven to be a welcome addition for people living and working in the area. The ease of visiting council and NHS services in one place has been well received and I'm sure through the continued hard work of both organisations, the centre will continue to provide important services to local people.”

Background

Gracefield Gardens is the first of a series of neighbourhood centres which bring together a range of community services under one roof to make them more accessible to the local population.

The centre has been built under a form of Public Private Partnership called a Local Improvement Finance Trust.

The private sector has designed, built and financed the centre and is responsible for its maintenance.
