

Hospital palliative care team

Information for patients in hospital and their carers

What does the palliative care team do?

The palliative care team gives specialist care and information to people facing serious illness. We recognise that emotional, spiritual, family and financial worries might be just as important to you as physical problems.

We work closely with the hospital doctors and nurses to support you, your partner, family and friends.

We will usually see you on the hospital ward, but we might also see you in the outpatient department.

Who is in the palliative care team?

We are a team of:

- clinical nurse specialists
- doctors
- specialist social workers
- consultant nurses and matrons
- psychological support staff
- pharmacists.

We work with community services including GPs, district nurses and community palliative care teams, as well as other local hospices and local hospitals.

How we can help you

We aim to:

- offer you advice about managing pain and other physical symptoms
- support you while you are facing serious illness
- offer practical suggestions to help you do things that are important to you
- offer guidance to your team in planning for your discharge from hospital
- offer support to those close to you
- inform you about other services that might be helpful to you, such as additional support at home, groups and complementary therapies
- inform you about research studies running in the department that you may be eligible to take part in
- help you to plan your future care.
