Nothando Mpala, project management apprentice in Group Operations

I thought I'd be just shadowing people but I've been really involved in so many projects since I've been here. I was a bit worried people would treat you differently as an apprentice but it's not like that. Everyone treats me as part of the team.

I really enjoy working here. I get the opportunity to be involved in a project and see it come to life.

It's been an amazing. People sometimes look down on apprenticeships, but I think it's better than going to university. I've been a university student, and at university you only get the theory side of it. With an apprenticeship you get both sides - you get to learn and experience a working environment.
